Dear Stephen

NSW Police has advised the Consular Emergency Centre in Australia and the Australian Embassy, Thailand that you are currently located in Thailand and they are concerned for your welfare.

I have tried to contact you on +61 412846712, however, I was unable to reach you. We would appreciate it if you could call the Australian Embassy in Thailand on +66 2 344 6300 or the Consular Emergency Centre on +61 2 6261 3305 at any time to confirm you are okay.

If you would like to speak to someone in confidence about how you are feeling, you can contact the Embassy on +66 (0) 2 344 6300 and be transferred to Lifeline (131 114) in Australia. After hours, our phone is diverted to our Consular Emergency Centre which is available 24-hours a day and they can also transfer you to Lifeline. For further information, please refer to our Managing your mental health | Smartraveller page.

Alternatively, should you wish to speak to a counselling service in Thailand, please contact the below services:

- Bangkok Counselling Service info@BangkokCounsellingService.com
- Samaritans English Help Line help@samaritansthai.com / 02 713 6791.
- New Counselling Services info@ncsbkk.com

I have also attached a list of local doctors and hospitals, some of which provide mental health support in Thailand.

For further information about our role, and when and how the Australian Embassy can assist, please refer to our Consular Services Charter. If you have any concerns for your safety in Thailand, please contact local authorities:

- Police: 199
- Tourist Police: 1155
- Ambulance: 1669
- Emergency Services: 199

Kind regards

Nat

Dear Nat,

Thank you for your concern and for reaching out. I can confirm that I am currently safe and well.

I appreciate the support offered by the Australian Embassy and the Consular Emergency Centre. At this time, I do not require assistance but will not hesitate to reach out should my circumstances change.

Kind regards,
Stephen
