Greg's question was truly thought-provoking.

For clarity, I would look to the story of Adam and Eve. Before they ate from the Tree of Knowledge, their innocence remained intact. Their knowledge and communion were entrusted entirely to the Father, and they trusted Him completely.

However, after eating from the tree, their actions began to be influenced by their newfound knowledge.

....which reminded me a lot of how Baptism works and the two approaches to it. It's such a fascinating parallel!

So, I'd conclude that the Holy Spirit requires us to actively cultivate its presence in our lives to maintain communion ..

How is it that months ago, I came to the conclusion that the Apple represents space-time itself, and now I see this theory being further supported here?

(Sorry, I know it's late and will leave you be now.)

Haha all good mate, I owe you a better answer sometime when I'm less busy but agree this makes sense - I will say, when we were talking about "at what age should children be baptised" and "at what age is a child capable of sin", this seems pretty analogous to the age of criminal responsibility, right. Which aligns with all this, because at a certain point in our lives, we're given enough knowledge, experience, maturity and revelation to choose God, and that point can be different for everyone depending on everything from their genetic/intellectual capacity to

Which aligns with all this, because at a certain point in our lives, we're given enough knowledge, experience, maturity and revelation to choose God, and that point can be different for everyone depending on everything from their genetic/intellectual capacity to comprehend, to the experiences of their life. Could be age 12, could be age 40. But baptism can mark a turning point to actively cultivating the Spirit (and overall a relationship with God), hence I guess why it is so important to be informed and committed when one does it.

Hi Robert,

Hope you are well and happy new year!

Was wondering if you had a moment to talk.

Hey mate, for sure! I'll be free in about 5 if you want to call me back then?

That would be great, thank you

What I meant by "not supposed to tell you about..." It is good to be humble in boasting about charity.

Monday 13 Jan 2025 • 12:15 pm

Haha, all good, I got that - I don't think it's boasting, it's fine to talk about having done good and charitable things, as long as you didn't do the good and charitable things just so to talk about having done them right

Exactly this

Save your pearls

I made it back this morning, all okay!

Thanks again Robert.

Any advice regarding the Temple Bamboo Planter I have currently listed?

I just published a free version on maker world because it feels wrong to to charge for a print even if it is to cover time and cost.

Perhaps it's enough for now that thos who have seen it has and I should take it down?

I do not wish to be a martyr at all.

This is a question which you cannot

This is a question which you cannot answer so I apologise in asking you. I already know a lot of the answers.

I need to reflect on this more but I think any item that could be deemed spiritual should be vetted by the church first.

The difficulty for me with this piece is I created it thinking it was just a modern looking piece with a clever approach to utilising the bamboo available at Bunnings.

And then later I come to understand and I am limited in removing because I spent so much time designing it and I have no job but have to answer to the court what I have been doing with my time!?

These problems are ludicrous

In other news, I had an interview for a position at a private school working in the I.T. department, think it went very well.

This is good man, fingers crossed the job comes through! Even if not, can't hurt to keep applying for more jobs like it in the meantime, right? Probably can't give you much advice on the other stuff haha, not really my field of expertise, but I wouldn't stress too much either way - can only do what you feel is best

Wednesday 15 Jan 2025 • 4:11 am

Right, can only do what I feel is best.

I followed my heart out to Brisbane and then I followed my heart coming back to Newcastle.

Okay, so I have revised the listing for this planter. Were going with the "less is more approach."

Ive registered for the Tuesday feed, Greg suggested to do so the lat time I say him after service a few weeks ago.

Honefully I do see you there!

I find it incredibly profound what I've come to learn in the last year having gone through a divorce and finding HBC.

While often unpleasant at times....., upon reflection..... it was a big year of growth for me both spiritually with Christ and God but also different members of the community at large.

Wednesday 15 Jan 2025 • 1:42 pm

Year of growth is good! HBC is a really good community, you could do far worse. I've found most people to genuinely care and have each other's best interests at heart. Doing Tuesdays is another good thing too, I've found them really good for more directly connecting with the w church community - may very see you

I make mistakes too.

Anyways, I'll let you go. You've been more than accommodatig with your time. Thanks again Robert

You're all good dude, soz I'm a bit tapped out at the moment and not super responsive, but always happy to bounce thoughts back and forth mate

Hi Robert,

I've decided to remove the bamboo pot from sale and will not be making the digital print freely available either.

Fortunately, no downloads.

Hope to see you again soon - if I were to attend a Tuesday feed, would you be in attendance?

Ive been told attendance is not required as I am pursuing bible study group. But, if I knew you would be in attendance, I may as well.

Thank you for keeping on the straight and narrow, HBC is a good place.

Sorry mate, I've been away and only just got back and have been getting smashed at work. Sounds good tho dude - nah I don't think I'll be at the feed this year sorry, I also have group now too. That said, once I'm back at the church proper, I'm sure we'll run into each other here and there, I'll be around. Glad you're feeling more positive about HBC! They're a really good bunch and genuinely care, especially Greg, absolute legend haha
