Hi Stephen

My name is Josh, I'm looking after the current life series.

Wondered if I could give you a call this evening in about 10 mins?

Thanks

Tuesday 29 Oct 2024 • 1:40 pm

Hi Josh, does the program allow for every other week?

I currently have the boys every Thursday but once a fortnight, in week 1, I have the boys Friday after school to Monday morning before school as well - It may be easier sell for Christian if he has the Friday to Sunday to fallback on to pursue his interests/needs.

Hi.

Well the series is a 5 week series, and if you are refering to the current one we are already in week 2. So you probably wouldn't make it to even %50 🙄

One thing I forgot to mention on the phone though...

There is an option of doing the series one to one. Which might be super handy in your circumstance.

Then you can basically do it at your own pace whenever works for you!

Would be happy to chat more about that if you like, maybe on another phone call.

Thank you Josh. This is handy to know.

My priorities ATM are preserving the boys interests first and foremost, GOD and Jesus Is certainly at the forefront of this. But I'm working with limited time of only 5 nights a fortnight. What's great about the suggestion about the one on one, I could pursue that on a night I do not have the boys.

But, I'm currently without steady employment which I plane to have sorted out in the next few weeks so at the junction, when I have clearer understanding of what those commitments look like I can chase this suggestion up.

Seperate and apart from all this, I'm trying to establish a new business but it's more of a plan b something to work towards in the future. I also have to retrain and persue certifications in Network+ and Security+ for better employment opportunities.

The work I was referring too last night

The work I was referring too last night was my legal matter; wif and I seperated and we're still working out the logistics, etc. I'm now representating myself because of legal costs, etc.

So, I have a lot on my plate but I certainly want to prioritise being available as well at Church.

I plan to regularly attend the Tuesday feed. Last night I didn't because I had just finished an affidavit which took a substantial amount of time and effort to get across the finish line.

All an effort and betterment of the boys. But I was exhausted last night and choose to excerise instead and unpack with excerise

Sounds like you're juggling a lot. I feel for you! Love that you're looking out for your boys and pursuing Jesus.

I don't want you to be too hard on yourself for not making it to certain Church things.

Sounds like LIFE 1:1 is a good option. We can do one and see how we go so that you don't have to lock in a reoccurring event in your calendar at this stage.

I'd love to do it with you. When would be a day/ time when you don't have the boys that you could consider catching up?

Friday 8 Nov 2024 • 9:48 am

I think it's likely that he's just saying that like all of the other things, laughter is fleeting and of no gain.

Like, you could spend all night laughing with your friends at the end of the day nothing was "gained" other than a fleeting sense of joy.

Keep in mind that this doesn't mean laughter is bad. As with all the other things he lists. They are mostly good things but amount to "nothing" at the end of the day in terms of true fulfillment.

And this is the message of the whole book too not just the one passage.

Yet, like everyone, I sometimes stumble in fully surrendering my actions to Him. I find comfort in knowing that even Christ stumbled as He carried the cross, showing us that perseverance is key. What truly matters is that we rise again, as our hearts remain steadfast even when our actions falter.

This is especially profound because Jesus represents God's unfailing love—a love that lifts us up when we fall and calls us to persevere in faith. What I was trying to communicate during our last session, needed time to discern.

Happiness and sadness, as we traditionally define them, do not truly exist, nor does evil in the conventional sense. This isn't to downplay the severity of evil or dismiss the profound impact of loss, but rather to view them through a deeper, spiritual perspective.

Evil, at its core, is a distortion of truth—a misrepresentation of happiness and sadness. Just as happiness can be found within sadness, and sadness can emerge even in moments of happiness, these two states are not absolute. Instead, they are reflections of how we perceive and interpret the world around us.

What truly exists is the temple being built around us—our lives and experiences—and how we feel in the moment when we look at it. The vital question is:  we seeing it clearly, or is our vision distorted by lies and

What truly exists is the temple being built around us—our lives and experiences—and how we feel in the moment when we look at it. The vital question is: Are we seeing it clearly, or is our vision distorted by lies and misrepresentations, often influenced by Satan? This is why knowing Christ is so vitally important. Christ serves as the lens of truth, enabling us to see the temple as it truly is—untainted by distortion and aligned with God's eternal purpose.

With regards to serving a WAVE: do you happen to have a New South Wales working with children check?

Not sure. I did work voluntarily a few years back in the Merewether Heights school canteen and needed a vulnerability check screening that I provided the school. I'll forward what I have in that regard and get to the bottom of it and sort it out.

To serve at Wave you need a WWCC number. You'd probably know if you had one.

Think back to when I shared with you about happiness and sadness, the walls of a temple being built, and the importance of alignment with Christ. We even touched briefly on tongues yesterday, the spectrum of it.

Last night I came to understand that that "confuse the language" has more to do with a slightly further fall - to become more disconnected from the context of all things we all subscribe to varying degrees; empathy

In other words to confirm the language is to confuse the universal language; empathy

That looks great. I'm spending some time in prayer now for God to provide for you financially at this time.

Oh that okay mate. Sorry. Look. I'm like weeks later I come to understand what it is that I feel I have created and then my ethics and principles kick in and I'm like well now what do I do? 😭

Hi Josh,

Great news—I've received my Working With Children Check (Volunteer)! Dan got in touch today about helping with the WAVE night events, and I'd love to lend a hand if I can. That said, my boys are with me that week, and since their program wraps up around noon, I'll need to keep the evenings flexible for them.

If there's a chance to help out during the day instead, I'm all in! Let me know what you think. I'm excited to be involved how I can.

Hi Josh,

I just got back this morning from a much-needed getaway and reset—something I probably should have done sooner, to be honest.

The drive up was absolutely beautiful, with some stunning scenery.

Ooooooh! Where did you go?

Brisbane for a few days

Hey Josh.

Just letting you know I have signed up for the Tuesday feed next year, hopefully I see you there.

No idea what to do about the bamboo planter listing. I think based upon what I have come to understand recently and people and where they are in the journey with Christ and God, it's best to move forward with a "less is more approach" so I have revised the listing. I still need to revise the sketchfab listing which I plan to do later this afternoon.

Can't help if I end up another martyr for no other reason then somebody has not had the same experiences I have had.

I'll edit the sketchfab digital this afternoon as well.

Hi Josh, this needs more context.

The last time I saw Greg, a few Sundays ago, he had mentioned that the Tuesday feed is his bible group and he hopes to see me there and so my commitment to Tuesday has more to do with that interaction with Greg.

The bible group I attend is on a Monday. It also may be that he wasn't aware I had joined a bible group but you knowing me, I do like catching up for a coffee or lunch so that's always an option as well.

Well if you wanna be there and it's not gonna be conflicting with Growth Group that's fine. But I think Grace group should be a higher priority.

One thing I will just make you wary of is that Greg will always be quite occupied with whoever the newest people at Tuesday feed are. There'll be a whole hoard of new ones after you, that he needs to try and meet as well so you might not find it a very engaging time with Greg .

I think that's the wonderful thing about growth group. where Greg fails to be able to know everyone and speak into the lives of everyone growth groups can become your primary pastoral support network. That's certainly been

Thank you again Josh for for all your help. I really enjoyed Wave. I wasn't able to make it Friday because I had an issue with my Etsy store and the bank; bank is unable to accommodate the use of special characters in my company name while ASIC and Etsy could and so it was necessary to go into the bank and have them write on their company letterhead that this inconsistency is technical limitation on their end only and not reflective of an inconsistency with disclosures from my end.

Josh and Christian however made it to Friday and both kids really enjoyed Wave.

Oh and my Etsy store was reopened this morning due to my efforts and I realised another sale and landed my 1st positive review!!

Correction to my earlier comment, I meant to use the term non-binary which as I understand encompass all genders?

I really need to get up to speed and perhaps better understand the politics in this regard. And this use of pronouns - when I was lat in the workplace this wasn't a thing.

But I understand it being very important to some others not so much.

Regarding Bitcoin, you have to consider the global economy at large ATM. Its literally the wild west.

Global banks are preparing for mass adoption.

Trump has stated their investigating establishing a BTC reserve.

Josh Church

The States are at a bit of odds but the one which so support are establishing their own reserves.

The USA would never consider establishing a BTC reserve unless they could pick it up at a good price - which they very much are atm. Not to mention the BTC which has been seized in the past.

Historically BTC always does well but you need to hold.

They have thrown into doubt the Fort Knox Gold reserves missing.

And then there's Trump looking out for his own self preservation.

I don't know if you have any holdings but if you don't you may want to consider but if you do, you must use a cold wallet. All of the losses due to Bitcoin are motivated against loss by doing 3 things.

- Understand fully how to use a cold wallet

Josh Church

- Understand fully how to use a cold wallet

- hold

- transfer in smaller increments - the risk lies in the exchange to a hot wallet (so you can move it to your bank account)

All of the losses all of them happen in the exchange so do not leave funds there!

But I would recommend given everything that's going on right now it's a prudent place to also hedge against inflation.

And the entire stock market on the whole is down ATM so really everything is tanking so it makes sense to me at least to pick an asset that cannot be depreciated by money printing which hasn't happened yet but due to happen in the USA soon which should have a positive impact on BTC
